2012 proved to be an extraordinary year for boat arrivals. An annual record number of boats arrived; The Gillard Labor government initiated extraordinary and extremely punitive laws approving offshore processing on Nauru and Manus Island (PNG); it 'excised' the entire country for migration purposes -- but the boats kept coming, and the daily, weekly or monthly arrival frequency even increased since these laws were passed.

On November 25, 2012 Immigration Minister Chris Bowen announced that boat arrival numbers were such that he would release many asylum seekers into the Australian community on Bridging Visas – without work rights – while others would be "deported" for processing to Nauru and Manus Island. However, under pressure the Minister's work ban for Bridging Visa holders in this category was 'softened'.
